APPENDIX A — THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinion of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impelled them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it and to institute new Government, laying its foundation's on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely affect their safety and happiness.

We, Therefore, the Representatives of the United States Of America, in General Congress Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these United colonies are, and of right ought to be free and Independent states that they are of dissolved from all allegiance to the British crown . . . and for the support of this Declaration, with a Firm Reliance on the Protection of Providence, We Mutually Pledge to Each Other Our Lives, Our Fortunes, and Our Sacred Honor.

APPENDIX B — ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION

To All to Whom these Presents shall come, we the undersigned Delegates of the States affixed to our Names send greeting. Whereas the Delegates of the United States of America in Congress assembled did on the 15th day of November in the year of our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred Seventy seven, and in the Second Year of the Independence of America agreed to certain articles of Confederation and perpetual union between the States.

Art. I. The Stile of this confederacy shall be "United States of America."

Art. XIII. . . . And Whereas it hath pleased the Great Governor of the World to incline the hearts of the legislatures we respectfully represent in Congress, to approve of, and to authorize us to ratify the said articles of Confederation and perpetual union..... done at Philadelphia in the state of Pennsylvania the ninth day of July the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred seventy-eight and in the third year of the independence of America.

APPENDIX C — THE NORTHWEST ORDINANCE (1787)

And, for extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, which form the basis whereupon these republics, their laws and constitutions are erected; to fix and establish those principles as the basis of all laws, constitutions, A. and governments, which forever hereafter shall be formed in the said territory: to provide also for the establishment of States, and permanent government therein, and for their admission to a share in the federal councils on an equal footing with the original States . . . (emphasis supplied)

Art. 3. Religion, morality, and knowledge, being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged. . . .

Art. 5. . . . Provided, the constitution and government so to be formed shall be republican, and in conformity to the principles contained in these articles . . .

APPENDIX D — PREAMBLE TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish Justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Federal Constitution Article VI . . . All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution as under the Confederation . . . and all treaties made or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

Article IV Section 1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state.

Section 4. The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government and shall protect each of them against invasion. . . .

ARTICLE VII DONE in convention by the unanimous consent of the States present the 17th day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the 12th.
